

Editorial Foreword

The International Review of Law has consistently published research that expands the horizons of legal scholarship, addressing both national and international laws, while maintaining a strong emphasis on comparative perspectives. In line with previous issues, this edition presents a collection of research papers that reflect diversity in subject matter as well as in the geographic backgrounds of the contributing scholars. Such breadth underscores the journal's commitment to serving as a global platform for the exchange of legal knowledge with international influence among both researchers and readers.

This second regular issue of 2025 comprises ten papers, as follows:

1. The Framework of the Right to the Freedom of Assembly in International Human Rights Law and its Application in Kuwait (Humoud Y. Alfadhli).
2. The Bill of Exchange Domiciliation Clause - A Comparative Study in the light of French Judicial Rulings (Fuad Shehab Shyyab).
3. The Legal Vision of the Right to Digital Oblivion - Analytical Study (Hussam Oabes Ouda).
4. Judicial Supervision of Arbitral Awards - A Comparative Study (Faouzi Belknani).
5. The Legal Status of the De Facto Director of the Company in the Tunisian Commercial Companies Law - Analytical Study (Racem Gassara).
6. Family Rights and Legal Protection in Bosnia and Herzegovina: Compliance with International Standards (Rijad Delić).
7. Concurrent Causation in Insurance – A Comparative Study between England and France (Bashayer Yousef Abdelaziz Al Majed).
8. Analytical Study on the Legality of Use of Sonic Boom as a Psywar Tool under International and Humanitarian Law (Darina Saliba Abi Chedid).
9. The Expected Medical Liability as a result of the Health Sector's Interaction with Artificial Intelligence – A Foresight-based, Analytical, and Comparative Study (Fahad Ahmad Almasoud).
10. Les régimes spéciaux de responsabilité civile et l'intelligence artificielle – quelles solutions pour le droit mauricien ? (Goran Georgijevic).

The Editorial Board extends its gratitude to all contributors to this issue and hopes that readers will find it a valuable resource for legal scholarship, as well as an inspiration for further research and writing in the field of law.
